LeConte Glacier

Experience the breathtaking beauty of LeConte Glacier, the southernmost tidewater glacier in the Northern Hemisphere. This awe-inspiring landscape offers an up-close encounter with one of Alaska's true wilderness highlights. Unlike larger cruise ships, which are too big to navigate the shallow entrance, we have exclusive access to this remarkable fjord. Spend the day exploring by kayak or small boat, and if conditions allow, step ashore to wander among icebergs resting on the beach.

Thomas Bay, Land of Kushtaka

Mist drapes the air as the gentle exhale of a whale stirs you from a well-earned rest. The anchor drops into the milky blue waters of Thomas Bay just as the summer sun begins to break through, lifting the fog. Then, a distant roar, the rush of water carving through the forest, marks your arrival at Cascade Creek, a breathtaking series of waterfalls. A favourite among the crew, this rare, accessible trail in Southeast Alaska offers hiking options for all skill levels. After exploring the forest, return to the Legacy for a hearty meal as the boat repositions to the other side of Thomas Bay. With unmatched water access, wrap up the day with a kayak to a salmon run or a skiff tour in search of bears.

Day 5

Kuiu Island

The west side of Kuiu Island serves as the playground for the day. This is black-bear territory, and Kuiu Island is home to the densest population of this iconic species on the planet. Nestled in a bay, the calm waters are inhabited by the smallest marine mammal on Earth, the sea otter. Rafts of otters drift by, completely unbothered by any presence, and just as adorable as expected. Humpback whales patrol the reefs, hunting for schools of herring, with resident bubble-netters being a rare and thrilling sight. The cold, nutrient-rich waters offer more than just above-water activities. Give snorkelling a try (with the warmest wetsuits known to man, there's no need for concern) and dive into an entirely new universe as the most diverse population of sea stars on Earth is revealed, something many find surprising. For a moment, the chill of the water fades as the experience transforms into what can only be described as a 'cold-water tropical reef.' The Pacific becomes the wildest touch-tank imaginable.

Day 6

Chichagof Island

Seek out the elusive Coastal Brown Bear along this rugged coastline. The eastern side of Chichagof Island boasts three specific areas offering exceptional opportunities to spot these magnificent creatures. Using his expert knowledge, your Captain will position you in the best spot, which may change throughout the day. This adventure could include the chance for hikes ashore, kayaking, skiff rides, and hopefully watching brown bears from our small boats and kayaks. The bear population is plentiful in this region. The day wraps up as we set sail, with guests sharing their experiences and photos with fellow travellers.

Day 7

Glacier Bay National Park

This national park spans 3.3 million acres (slightly smaller than the state of Connecticut). Take a moment to appreciate the scale. Most visitors only experience a small portion of the park, but not you. You'll venture further, exploring areas that 99% of visitors never reach. Hike across the outwash field of glaciers flowing down the Fairweather Mountain Range, with the refreshing breeze from the nearby snow and icefields invigorating you. As the day draws to a close, it's time for the Captain's Dinner. But that's not all, you'll also enjoy a slideshow showcasing the incredible experiences from the week.
